SnapAV to Distribute Sonos' Wireless Sound System

Beginning October 2019, SnapAV will be a national distributor of Sonos, including its new Sonos Port, Sonos Move, and Sonos One SL products

Charlotte, NC – September 11, 2019 – In October 2019, SnapAV will begin offering Sonos products as part of its extensive lineup of audio solutions for professional installers. The full Sonos system of products, including Sonos Port, Sonos Move, and Sonos One SL, will be available through snapav.com, as well as each of the company's affiliated local branches in the United States – Allnet, Volutone, MRI and Custom Plus.

Sonos offers a broad range of wireless audio products that support more than 100 streaming services all controlled through the Sonos app, Apple AirPlay 2, and popular voice assistants like Amazon Alexa and the Google Assistant. With this national distribution partnership, professional installers now have even more ways to access Sonos' system of products through SnapAV's award-winning eCommerce portal and local branches.

"We continue to deliver choice to our dealers," said Mike Jordan, leader of SnapAV's Audio strategy at SnapAV. "Choice in where they buy - online or locally in a branch - as well as choice in what they buy. This is a huge step for Sonos, SnapAV, our dealers, and frankly... the industry."

Sonos is currently supported through SnapAV's OvrC Pro platform, providing dealers with robust remote monitoring and diagnostic capabilities. "We're committed to providing dealers with truly custom solutions that empower amazing audio experiences," said Kenny Kim, leader of the OvrC Cloud Platform. "Pairing OvrC Pro with Sonos gives dealers total visibility into the entire network of Sonos devices, providing unparalleled remote troubleshooting capabilities, eliminating unnecessary truck rolls, and providing world-class service with immediate response time."
